Section D: Read the following passage and answer ALL the questions on a separate paper:

According to the 2005 census, the population of Malta stands at 404,039 inhabitants. 200,715 are males and 203,324 are females. Malta’s population density, which amounts to 1,282 persons per square kilometre, is considered as one of the highest in the world because there are many inhabitants compared to the small size of the island. It is expected that by the year 2025 the local population will rise to 424,028 people. Like any other developed country, Malta’s society is also experiencing the symptoms of an elderly society. The census revealed that the number of people aged between 50 and 64 is increasing at a rate which is actually higher than that of other European countries.

Questions:

1. What is a census? How often does a census normally take place? (3)

2. Which factors contribute to an increase in population? Give FOUR examples. (8)

3. Explain what population density means. Mention TWO environmental problems encountered in densely populated regions. (6)
