Text 1: Audio

You are going to listen to a conversation between a tour guide and a tourist discussing Camden Market.

Tour Guide: Hello, I'm Emma and I'm your tour guide for today. Welcome to Camden Town, a place famous worldwide for its fashion, artists, clubs, and music but it is most famous for its market, the biggest market you can visit in London! It is held daily in Camden, but, admittedly, it is busiest at the weekend.

Woman: I can't wait, really. What time does the market open?

Tour Guide: It's open from 10am to 6pm. Is it your first time here?

Woman: Yes, it is! Oh and another question, please. What is the best way to get there? I'd like to get there early.

Tour Guide: You're spoilt for choice. To get to Camden Market, you can take a taxi or even a boat but the quickest way would be by train from here. For a cheaper fare, you can always take the bus: 24, 214, 274 or 393. Any of these take you there really. Being Sunday, expect to see crowds today!

Woman: What do you mean?

Tour Guide: Camden Market is always busy. More than 400,000 people visit the place every weekend from all over the world to look, shop, eat and socialise. There is music everywhere. The street food is delicious, and it is the cheapest in north London.

Woman: On second thoughts, I might skip it today and go the market during the week with my sister. Can you suggest how we can spend our day there?

Tour Guide: Well, you can start with a hearty breakfast. Then, do some clothes shopping. Later, stop for a tasty lunch at one of the many cafes or street food stalls. After lunch, you can pick up some old records at one of the market's music stalls. They have hundreds of records there. After all that shopping, I suggest you take a cruise along Regent's canal on a waterbus. You may wish to round off your day by enjoying the live music entertainment Camden has to offer.

Woman: Wow. Thanks for the suggestions!

Tour Guide: Glad I could help. I'm sure you and your sister won't be disappointed.

You are going to watch and listen to an Emergency Exit and Evacuation plan.

Workplace emergencies occur without warning...and when they do, preparation can mean the difference between life and death. In any situation requiring an immediate evacuation, such as a fire or explosion, a hazardous material spill, an act of workplace violence or an emergency situation happening just outside of your facility, it is important to not only have an emergency evacuation plan in place, but to clearly communicate that plan to your employees. This ensures that everyone knows what to do when an emergency happens. The three steps that your evacuation plan should include are: the pathway to the exit, the exit itself and the exit discharge. We'll refer to them as TO, THROUGH and AWAY.

Step 1: "How do I get TO the exit?" If the exit itself is not immediately visible, then look for "Pathway to Exit Marking" or "Path marking" signage that will direct you to your nearest Exit. Look for signs, floor markers, arrows and floor tapes marking exit routes and stairwells. Glow in the dark signage makes your pathways even safer in the event of a power outage or a fire. Path marking not only informs you of which way to go, but which way NOT to go. Any doors or passageways along a pathway that could be mistaken for an exit are required by OSHA to be marked with a sign saying "Not An Exit" or with a sign that clearly identifies its use.

Step 2: "Which door must I go THROUGH?" OSHA requires that all doors which open directly to the outside be equipped with UL 924 Listed Exit Signs, which means simply that the exit sign must be lit. They can be either electrically lit, or zero-energy photo luminescent requiring no electricity at all and:

Step 3... "How far AWAY from the building should I get?" You need to move quickly to your facility's pre-determined Emergency Evacuation Area and notify your supervisor right away that you made it out safely. It is very important that you DO NOT LEAVE the premises! If you leave without telling anyone, your co-workers might think that you're still inside the building, and it could result in the injuries or deaths of first responders that would be sent in to rescue you! Remember... To, Through and Away. This is your key to getting out safely in a workplace emergency. For our full selection of Exit and Evacuation products, visit us online today at emedco.com.
